

WEED WORLD™

ISSUE 129

ORGANIC
IN OREGON

Outdoor Garden
YIELD+

SUPER SOIL
the HUMBOLDT way

HOW TO
Dry & Cure
LIKE A PRO

SAMPLE
PAGE

WWW.WEEDWORLD.CO.UK

18 EU €5.00
US $7.99
CAN $8.99

DISPLAY UNTIL END OF SEPTEMBER 2017

38

The Barb Sift Rosin Reviewed by the Dank Duchess

Within the cannabis community, I generally feel very welcome. Among the cadre of cannabis growers, processor, and enthusiasts, I am comfortable holding my own in debate and discussion about techniques and the ever-changing landscape of concentrates. Across the ocean in Spain...

44

What's in the Garden? Subcool, TGA Genetics

One of the questions I get asked is what strains I will run in the outdoor charity garden this year. I have a lot of success in my area of Northern California. This is important for a few reasons. It's a busy finishing times to ensure flowers have...

48

Organic Simple PAGE

If you've ever grown your own, then the chances are that you've done what pretty much everyone else does: buy some soil, put it in a pot with some plant food and then sown the seedlings. Then they've been routed. It's pretty much a paradigm for cannabis cultivation that we grow in pots...

- 10 Featured Products
- 18 My Favorite Bud
- 30 Israeli Medical Cannabis Inflation
- 60 How Humboldt Treats its Soil
- 72 Hemp in fashion
- 76 Outdoor cannabis growing - are you missing out?
- 80 Roots Healing: An interview
- 84 The Tipping Point, Part 2
- 88 A-Z of Cannabis
- 90 New CBD-rich strains from Sweet Seeds
- 94 Jessica's Story: Epilepsy and Cannabis
- 98 The Ethical Misconception Surrounding Cannabis
- 102 Grow Report: NorStar
- 106 Strain Report: Auto Duck
- 108 Grow Report: Critical Jack
- 112 Case Study: Medicinal Marijuana Patient Reports
- 116 Q&A with Professor Lee
- 120 Reviews: Movies, Games, Books and Music
- 124 The Cannabis Conjuror
- 128 Strain Report: Blueberry Kush
- 132 De-criminzlization Ripoff

Plus! Look out for the BONUS strain reports! This issue's cover: Siskyou's Cotton Candy Cane (Emerald Triangle Seeds)

SAMPLE PAGE

SAMPLE PAGE

OUTDOOR Cannabis Growing

BY TONY | DUTCH PASSION SEED COMPANY | DUTCH-PASSION.COM

Jessica Herndon's story started when she was diagnosed with Nocturnal Epilepsy at 26 years old, back in 2013. Without any prior symptoms or health issues she started having seizures during her sleep. She experienced full grand mal seizures that usually lasted for more than a minute and this type of event features a loss of consciousness and violent muscle contractions. It's the type that most people think of when picturing a seizure. "I've had seizures that when I wake up, my body aches like I've been in a fight."

After consulting a neurologist, she was prescribed 2 different pharmaceuticals. She experienced 32 seizures in the year that followed her diagnosis. The doses only got higher and the effects were barely noticeable. "Dealing with those drugs was one of the worst experiences of my life". Being a mom of 3, there is already too much to bear without the medication. At that time, Jessica was facing constant fatigue and rage, the number one side effect of the second pharmaceutical she was prescribed.

She, like most patients in the US and around the world, was prescribed traditional medication. She was given approved pharmaceuticals with the final aim of getting her life better. These pills are expensive and require a controlled intake to achieve results. It's not a good feeling when you're taking expensive pills that you don't feel are helping you much. The Keppra and Lamictal made up to a total monthly cost of $600, which is a lot compared to the current $100 Jessica spends on cannabis. And even this expense she will be able to cut down as this is her first year growing her own cannabis. In the future, after the initial investment, there will be very few expenses in keeping the cannabis growing. As long as she keeps a controlled intake, very soon it will be very inexpensive to keep herself happily medicated during the whole year.

She consumes the plant with the same control and routine she had when taking the pharmaceuticals. This allowed Jessica to maintain a controlled and on budget use. Treating it as a medicine keeps her mind from wanting it at unnecessary times.

"While I was on these meds for 2 years, my personality changed and turned me into someone I didn't know." Keppra, "...caused me to have crazy mood swings and even started giving me thoughts of harming myself." "The short-term memory loss was hard to deal with at first, especially at work. Same with the mood swings. Staying awake was a chore, I always wanted to sleep." At that moment, Jessica knew that these pharmaceuticals were doing more harm than good. "While I was on both of these medications I used Cannabis daily to try to help control some of the side effects."

Jessica saw that cannabis could actually do her some good and bring benefits to her life that the pharmaceuticals were not. She researched and talked to specialists to try and find a suitable solution that would work for her and her condition. Not every cannabis strain or type is seizure-free. She made the decision, as a recreational user, to use the drug she knew and felt comfortable with as a medicine. It's a decision Jessica will never go back on.

September, three years will have passed since her last prescribed traditional medication. She was given approved pharmaceuticals with the final aim of getting her life better. These pills are expensive and require a controlled intake to achieve results. It's not a good feeling when you're taking expensive pills that you don't feel are helping you much. The Keppra and Lamictal made up to a total monthly cost of $600, which is a lot compared to the current $100 Jessica spends on cannabis. And even this expense she will be able to cut down as this is her first year growing her own cannabis. In the future, after the initial investment, there will be very few expenses in keeping the cannabis growing. As long as she keeps a controlled intake, very soon it will be very inexpensive to keep herself happily medicated during the whole year.

is also seizure free and enjoying life. With the help of great people in the cannabis community, Jessica now knows a life without pills and a term called "happily medicated". She medicates herself daily with a routine that she enjoys and can truly call "living".

Like many people around the globe whose life has been eased due to cannabis, Jessica owes many of her daily pleasures to this plant. Small things that many of us take for granted, she can now enjoy. Even if not for the physiological benefits, her cannabis medication is worth it for the peace of mind it brings. "Putting my Trust in Cannabis was scary at first. Not only was stopping my meds something that affected me, it affected my family. There was definitely a large risk in stopping. My doctor advised against it, but supported my cannabis use while I was on the prescriptions. I wanted control of my life again. The